

What's Happening

Quincy Climate Action Network is committed to educating residents, businesses, and local government about what we can do to fight climate change.

Our Programs

- In spring 2019, QCAN volunteers presented a unit on climate change to all 31 sixth-grade classes in the Quincy Public Schools. Educating young people is critical since they will be most affected by climate change and must be motivated to take action to mitigate it.
- We sponsor regular lectures and films on climate change and other environmental issues at the Thomas Crane Public Library.
- We host a candidates' night focused on the environment during election seasons to hear mayoral and city-council candidates' perspectives on green issues.
- In July 2019, we organized the first-ever Quincy Environmental Fair, bringing together 20 organizations offering free, fun green activities. We hope to make this an annual gathering.
- QCAN regularly tables at Quincy events to spread the word about the causes and consequences of climate change.

What You Can Do

- Volunteer to participate in our teaching program! We will train you.
- Attend our lectures and film presentations and help spread the word. You can also email us your event ideas at info@quincycan.org.
- Sign up for QCAN's mailing list for updates about local climate-related issues.
- Follow us on Facebook.
- Join QCAN or come to a monthly meeting announced on our website, quincycan.org.